Fran Pavley

Fran presents her arguments for getting your vote for the assembly.

Education

Fran received her Masters Degree at CSU Northridge, taught middle school for 28 years and completed her teaching career in Moorpark. Senator Pavley brought together over 300 educators and students from Ventura County with California's Superintendent of Public Instruction to address the challenges facing our public education system. Since 2007, the University of California, the California State University and the California Community Colleges have been cut by $2.65 billion. Tuition has more than doubled while services, classes and student aid continue to be slashed. Senator Pavley is working on important legislation aimed at reducing the cost of textbooks. She is also working hard to pass the Middle Class Scholarship Act to ensure that families can keep more of their hard earned cash and lower their debit.

Public Safety

Last year, she worked with the California Chamber of Commerce to improve California's business climate by streamlining state regulations through regulatory reform. Her new law requires agencies to more rigorously assess economic impacts. While in the Senate, she created the Valley Advisory Council, which is comprised of business and community leaders from the San Fernando Valley, meeting regularly on issues impacting the community. Senator Pavley has been instrumental in bringing together California's green-industry leaders to identify ways in which industry and government can partner to grow green manufacturing, business, technology and innovation.

During Senator Pavley's tenure in the Legislature, public safety and crime prevention have been top priorities. Fran has a long record of fighting for public safety reforms including cracking down on elder abuse, sexual abuse and domestic violence. Working closely with the Los Angeles County District Attorney's office, she has authored laws ensuring the prosecution of child sexual abuse cases, requiring that sexually violent predators serve their court ordered parole. This year she is authoring legislation to increase convictions for sex crimes against children, such as child prostitution, human trafficking and child pornography.

As a member of the Assembly and Senate Transportation Committees for her entire time in the Legislature, Senator Pavley has been actively working to represent her constituents to secure funding, address safety concerns and provide leadership on the states transportation policy. Her legislation reduced congestion by promoting the use of public transit and allowing hybrid vehicles in the carpool lanes. Pavley helped to secure funds for many local transportation projects including the construction of the Orange Line bus way and installation of traffic signals in San Fernando Valley.

Environment/Energy

Throughout her legislative career, Fran has shown the way to the common ground between the environment and the economy, by bringing a diverse range of leaders together to draft and negotiate win-win policies for California. Senator Pavley's landmark clean cars law united national security leaders, global automakers, and clean energy advocates behind a common purpose: to plug the hole in American families' budgets caused by our addiction to oil by offering consumers more affordable, fuel efficient car options. Now known as the "Pavley Law," Fran's efforts pushed the President of the United States to adopt national standards that will save the average driver about $4,000 dollars over the life of the car, money that would otherwise go to big oil companies.

Fran's Global Warming Solutions Act sent a strong signal to businesses around the world that California is the epicenter of the global clean energy economy. Since the California's clean energy economy has grown, while many other sectors have faltered. More than 330,000 Californians are now employed in jobs in construction, manufacturing, business, and other sectors of the clean energy economy; and 55 cents of every dollar invested into clean-tech startup companies are invested in California.

As chair of the Natural Resources and Water Committee, she helped with five major pieces of legislation that set the stage for greater reliability for Southern California's water supply, along with the restoration of the fragile Bay-Delta in Northern California. For more than 30 years, Pavley has worked with the Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy to acquire and protect open space, develop trails and public access to lands throughout Los Angeles and Ventura Counties.

Senator Pavley is an acknowledged leader in establishing water conservation policies across California and in protecting public access to coastal resources and protecting other ocean resources. As chair of the Natural Resources and Water Committee, she helped with five major pieces of legislation that set the stage for greater reliability for Southern California's water supply, along with the restoration of the fragile Bay-Delta in Northern California. For more than 30 years, Pavley has worked with the Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy to acquire and protect open space, develop trails and public access to lands throughout Los Angeles and Ventura Counties.
